The question of numbering the players was officially avoided, according to Walter Camp, of Yale, who was elected secretary of the committee at the meeting, and so this matter will be left to the discretion of the colleges themselves, with the indication that numerals will sooner or later be found on the interest of all gridging players.

als will sooner or later be found on the jerseys of all gridiron players.

Mr. Camp seemed to be far more interested in the increasing of the penalty for interference with the catcher of a forward pass from ten to fifteen yards than in a discussion of the numbering of the players. The feeling of the committee, said Mr. Camp, was that the penalty for such an infraction of the rules should be made even more severe, but it was decided finally that if the punishment was made too great the officials in a game would be liable to err on the side of leniency and only enforce the penalty in extreme cases.

The rule affecting the forward pass also received some changing at the hands of the committee, and when the The rule affecting the forward pass also received some changing at the hands of the committee, and when the teams take up the game again in the fall of 1916 this is what they will do: A forward pass made on the first, second or third down by a team near its own goal line, which becomes incomplete by striking the ground behind the goal line, is a safety (just as a running play if down in that territory would be a safety), but if incomplete on the fourth down, the ball goes to the opposing side at the point where the scrimmage occurred.
